Sale of Enoxaparin (generic Lovenox) not restricted

A lawsuit filed against Massachusetts-based biotech company Momenta Pharmaceuticals has not resulted in any restrictions on the sale of the popular injection enoxaparin.

The suit was filed by Sanofi-Aventis SA in an attempt to halt the generic production and sale of their patented drug Lovenox, which doesn't officially expire until 2012. According to the U.S. Supreme court a scientist associated with Sanofi had withheld information on the drug when applying for the patent.

Momenta was the first to receive FDA approval of the generic but they were soon followed by Teva, who now carries FDA approval as well.

A hearing is scheduled for August 17th to extend the binding decision from the status conference.
